In reflection of my years at Auburn University, I am grateful for immeasurable opportunities and memories. Celebration, joy, and the Auburn Spirit have taken my time here from a college experience to the Auburn experience. Students enjoy so many milestone moments, we almost forget each one was earned by hard work and late nights. I have loved my time at Auburn so thoroughly because I received early wisdom, perspective, and advice from the Auburn family that has clarified and brilliantly lit my path here for three years.

I've pursued my personal goal of being an entertainment attorney through a unique combination of involvement as the Auburn University Singers Student Conductor, a member of 5 choral groups, Pi Lambda Sigma Pre-Law Honor Society Secretary, political internships, and event planning as the Director of Homecoming 2022.

I was so grateful for this long-term clarity that I sought to provide it for others as a Student Recruiter for three years, President of the College of Liberal Arts for two terms where I founded close partnerships with the Career Center, faculty and the Dean for professional development. Now as AVP of the Executive Student Council, I advise the Presidents of all 13 colleges on how to best support their member's careers at Auburn and beyond.

Wisdom is a luxury so many students receive late, resulting in career delays and missed opportunities. Our students deserve to grow into kind, skilled, accomplished Auburn men and women without confusion. The Auburn family should equip every student with wisdom through mentorship, personal development, and professional experience.

Wise with Weyerman will provide a comprehensive informational document including opportunities for,

- Mentorship. Clear, comprehensive advice makes a huge difference when it is paired with a lasting relationship. College students with mentors are proven to get higher grades, be more involved, have higher job placement, and are twice as satisfied with college. I will list all programs intended to develop professionally and personally rewarding peer, faculty, and professor mentorships.
- Personal Development. 77% of employers state that it is difficult to find a college graduate with adequate communication and interpersonal skills. Being able to offer the best of yourself and find the best in others will grow Auburn into a more inclusive environment for all backgrounds and diverse opinions. Participating in clubs and programs that exercise effective communication, collaboration, and positive conflict resolution skills set an Auburn student apart.

- Professional Experience. Internships, jobs, professional organizations, and major-related clubs, organized by college and job field are the best career stepping stones to grant tangible accomplishments before entering the workforce.

I will provide each member of the Auburn Family with these resources to broaden their perspective and intentionally plan for their future because “I believe in education, which gives me the knowledge to work wisely.” I invite you to be Wise with Weyerman because I’ve sought out my path, and I want to help you find yours! War Eagle!
