Platform: The most important thing I've learned at Auburn is that our greatest successes come when we can depend on each other. No matter what you're studying, the College of Science and Mathematics is undoubtedly challenging, but it's the spirit of community and connection that make this school truly unique. I, for one, can attest to the academic and mental struggles that come with being a COSAM student, but the people of this school have always been there for me to rely on. Dozens of fellow peers, professors and faculty within COSAM have helped me along my Auburn journey and I wouldn't be where I am today without them. I believe every student deserves to feel connected within this school, and my goal as President is to make that possible for everyone. First, I want to extend awareness of the academic services that many COSAM students may not know about, including Academic Advising, the Drop-In Center, and the Math Tutoring Center. These are all helpful, well-established services that too many students are not aware of, and thus not benefitting from. I also want to prioritize spreading awareness of the campus-wide Student Counseling and Psychological Services. No student should be alone in facing any mental health difficulties, and I want every COSAM student to know that seeking help is always encouraged and readily available. Finally, I want to strengthen the culture of connection within the school. I personally want to get to know as many students as possible and be a familiar face that people feel they can come to with anything. The goal of my office hours is to have an open door for questions, concerns, ideas, or even just a friendly conversation. I would be honored to serve as your President, and I am eager to connect with all of you.
