Platform: My name is Kate Perdue, and I am excited to be a candidate for Senator of the Raymond J. Harbert College of Business. I believe that I would serve well as a senator representing the College of Business because I am passionate about improving the Auburn experience for all students. Coming from out of state, I bring a diverse set of ideas and personal interests to the table. While moving so far from home and not knowing many people at Auburn is difficult, Auburn and the College of Business immediately felt like home and now have become my family here. The College of Business continues to teach me so much, giving me a deep appreciation for Auburn. I would love to have the opportunity to give back and represent the students, helping it thrive in all the ways I can. I think it is important to have out-of-state students feel as connected as in-state students from the moment they start school. If elected Senator, my top priority will be to bridge the gap between involvement opportunities and all students. Getting involved is an essential part of college and resume building, and I would like all students to be aware of these opportunities so they can take advantage of them. With this, I hope to also bring together students and Senators to evaluate the effectiveness of this new idea. With more ways to get involved in Auburn and the College of Business increasing yearly, I hope every student regardless of where they come from can see these opportunities and try for them. I would consider it an honor to serve and advocate for the students of the Harbert College of Business.
